Twin Shocks Jolt

Sierra Nevadas

Tuesday A. M.

Center of Trembler Set
About Thirty-Five Miles
From Reno.

Residents of Truckee and near-by Sierra Nevada communities were startled Tuesday morning by two short but sharp earthquakes. Houses and buildings shook, but no damage was reported. Many people did not feel the shock and knew nothing of the disturbance until their friends mentioned it.

According to authoritative information, the first shock came at 8:09 a.m. and the second at 8:30. The first was very light and the second more intense. The center was reported to be about 35 miles west of Reno, by authorities there.

Ernest Danzger of Norden reported that the second and more violent shock gave the impression of a truck hitting the store and was followed by a receding roar as the shock moved southward.

"Waddles" Maher, forest service lookout on Martis Peak, said the shock loosened the snow on the roof which slid as the trembler struck. It was also felt at Verdi Peak, according to Ranger H. I. Snider.

TAHOE CITY, Oct. 16—A small but sharp earthquake was felt here by many residents Tuesday morning at 8:30. Houses shook and floors trembled but no damage resulted.

Grammar School Club Is Formed On Golden Rule

Recently formed in the Intermediate Grades of the Truckee Grammar School is a Kind Deeds Club. The purpose of this organization is to have each of its members perform at least one kind deed each day. At the election of officers Eugene Gini was elected president; George Lazzari, vice president; Loretta Lewis, secretary, and Charlotte Gates, treasurer.

As a term project the club will work along with the Red Cross to do its bit to alleviate suffering. In this regard Mrs. Grant Keetch was invited to the last meeting of the club to give suggestions on what might be done for the Red Cross by the Intermediate Grades as a group.

Physical Education At School Here Progresses

Functioning along with the new physical education program this year at the grammar school is the very popular block letter system. The purpose of this is to award those students who are deserving—by virtue of their scholastic and athletic ability—the school's emblem of honor.

The block letters are six inches high and are made of red and gold felt. The girls' block letters are mounted on a diamond shaped shield to distinguish them from the boys'. For a student to receive his block "T" it is necessary to earn a total of 250 points. These points can be earned only in athletic competition. To date there have been four Point Award contests held and those students who have received the most points are Jim Preston, Ken Snider, Martin Oroz, Harvey Hocker, Yolanda Giovannoni, Jean Bowers and Ofelia Dominguez.

Local Red Cross Ships Articles to Nevada City

The Truckee branch of American Red Cross sent to county headquarters in Nevada City the following finished articles:

Four childrens skirts; six beanies; six sweaters; two hospital shirts; two pair of socks; six baby gowns; one blanket and five childrens dresses.

There is plenty of material on hand to work with and interested parties are urged to call Mrs. Grant Keetch at Truckee 206.

Peace Officers Meeting

The Placer County Peace Officers Association enjoyed a trout dinner at Rainbow Tavern last week. Thomas French of Newcastle, association president, presided.

District Attorney Lowell Sparks spoke on defense problems and L. C. Anderson, Roseville attorney, gave a brief talk.

Fred Kohler of Tahoe City and Harold Laity of Truckee were among those present.

Well, folks, the fishing and hunting season are over in this district for another six and half months. We can not deny that the seasons have been good ones and we can look forward to another good fishing season next year due to the efforts and money which have been expended in stocking the streams and lakes. The state has planted millions of trout throughout the area and more than 145,000 of the 150,000 fry placed in the San Francisco Flycasting tanks for feeding in August will be freed late this month. These efforts and expenditures would be utterly wasted were it not for the program of law enforcement and fair dealing which is being enforced by officers and citizens alike. We are awake to the value of our fishing and hunting in this community and will continue to protect it against violators.

We should be grateful to the San Francisco Flycasting Club for the benefits we derive from their work in keeping the Truckee River stocked with trout. While the town contributes financially to the cost of feeding the trout, the fine facilities supplied by the club, to say nothing of the additional expense to which they are put, gives them a right to our wholehearted cooperation.

Since our arrival in Truckee one of our chief complaints has been the lack of use given the grammar school gymnasium. It is, therefore, most gratifying to report that the children of that school at least have the privileges of using the room as a gym. The board has agreed that Tom Griffin, the new teacher, can utilize the auditorium-gym and that worthy has certainly taken full advantage of his opportunity by organizing teams and settling down to a good physical education program. While it is nothing more than should be expected, we must agree that it was quite an accomplishment after reviewing the past performances of the cast.

P. T. A. Rewards Class Winning Members Drive

The Truckee Union Parents and Teachers Association, with the help of the grammar school faculty, this week entertained Tom Griffin's room which was the winner of the P. T. A. membership drive. Games were played and refreshments served.

At the same time the children brought their packages of toys which are to be sent to England for the British children's Christmas.

The high-school party for the winners of the membership drive will be held soon.

The next meeting of the P. T. A. will be held in the grammar school in the afternoon of Nov. 7.

Truckee Youth to Become Naval Reserve Cadet Soon

Addison Nelson last week passed the required tests and will become a cadet in the United States Naval Reserve some time in January. Upon completion of a three-months course at Northwestern University, he will be commissioned an ensign in the Naval Reserve.

Nelson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Nelson of Truckee. He graduated from local schools, secured his bachelor of arts degree at San Francisco State College and took graduate work in mathematics at University of San Francisco. Since graduation he has been employed in the Union Oil station here and teaching in the elementary school system of Grass Valley.

Sierra Pacific Putting Up New Station Near Here

The Sierra Pacific Power Company is constructing an all-steel sub-station where their lines meet those of the PG&E near Lake Mary. According to F. W. Gaennie, manager for the Sierra Pacific here, the station will be increased in capacity over the old wooden sub-station now there. New transformers and other equipment will increase the efficiency of the service in the mountains.

The project will cost $11,000 and will be completed in the near future, Gaennie said.

LOCAL SKI MEETS ARE SANCTIONED

Truckee Delegates Attend Ski Association Conclave In Yosemite National Park

Class B Downhill, Slalom Qualification Plus Class A, B, C and D Jumping Events On Truckee Hill Get Okeh From Schedule Committee.

TRUCKEE WILL AGAIN BE host to the regional Class B downhill and slalom qualification meet in 1942. This is the word that the Truckee Outing Club delegation of Robert C. Bowers, Robert W. Seibold and Chester M. Matson brought back from the California Ski Association convention at Yosemite's Ahwahnee Hotel last Saturday.

The schedule committee, under the chairmanship of Bill Stenaas, secretary of the association, also sanctioned a jumping meet for Truckee in classes A, B, C and D. The downhill and slalom meet will be held next Feb. 7 and 8 and the jumping meet will be held Jan. 13 and 14. Both of these dates are tentative but the events are definitely sanctioned for Truckee.

Other meets of local interest set were the state championships for class B downhill and slalom at Tahoe, late in March and the four-way championships for national class A skiers at Sugar Bowl on March 21 and 22.

Another zone for qualification meets has been set up, created by paring the existing four districts. Thus, the number of contestants at a single qualification meet will be cut.

Featured on the program of the convention was a demonstration of ski patrol equipment. The local representatives brought back several new ideas for the outing club along that line. Talks by forest rangers were heard at the convention.

The Placer and Nevada county ordinances assessing a $10 license on all ski-tow operators were discussed. Both ordinances also attach certain safety regulations on such operators and the consensus of opinion at the meeting favored the legislation.

Tahoe Ranger is Speaker At Rotary Club Meeting

Ranger Charles Arment of Tahoe Park spoke on the Life History of a Tree at Monday night's meeting of the Truckee-Tahoe Rotary Club. Paul Crandall was program chairman and Oscar Jones presided. Robert Seibold was a guest at the meeting.

Two Fires Put Out On Single Day By Volunteer Firemen

McKay, Filipeic Property Endangered By Blazes On Sabbath.

Prompt action on the part of the Truckee Volunteer Fire Department twice Sunday averted what might have been a disastrous fire.

The first blaze occurred in the rear of the home of Mrs. Elizabeth McKay about two o'clock in the afternoon. Of an undetermined origin, the fire broke out in adjacent shed and, fanned by a strong wind, was blazing high and in the direction of the house when the firemen and other volunteers arrived on the scene and extinguished it before headway could be made.

Shortly before 7 p.m. on the same day, a threatening fire broke out in an apartment on Main Street East occupied by L. R. Connors and owned by A. Filipeic. In a matter of minutes the firemen had the fire under complete control.

Assistant Chief Tony Pace directed the operations of the fire fighters in the absence of Chief N. F. Dolley.

Flycaster President Tells Lions Of Trout Problems

Pointing out the necessity of protecting trout in the Truckee river if fishing is to continue as one of our major assets, D. E. Kessler, president of the San Francisco Flycasting Club, last night addressed a meeting of the Truckee Lions Club. The picture Kessler painted was not a bright one, although he offered several suggestions by which the fishing could not only be maintained but increased.

One of the methods advocated by the club president was a proposal to make the Truckee, or at least a portion of it, an exclusive fly fishing stream. This, he said, would result in permitting natural spawning and would restock the stream, with the aid of other agencies, such as rearing and planting, protection against fish enemies and law violations, within a short time.

The speaker praised the past efforts of the local people in their trying to keep the stream up to normal for fishing and urged them to continue their work. Kessler was the guest of A. P. Leitch.

My Place In The Sun

by DOUG BARRETT

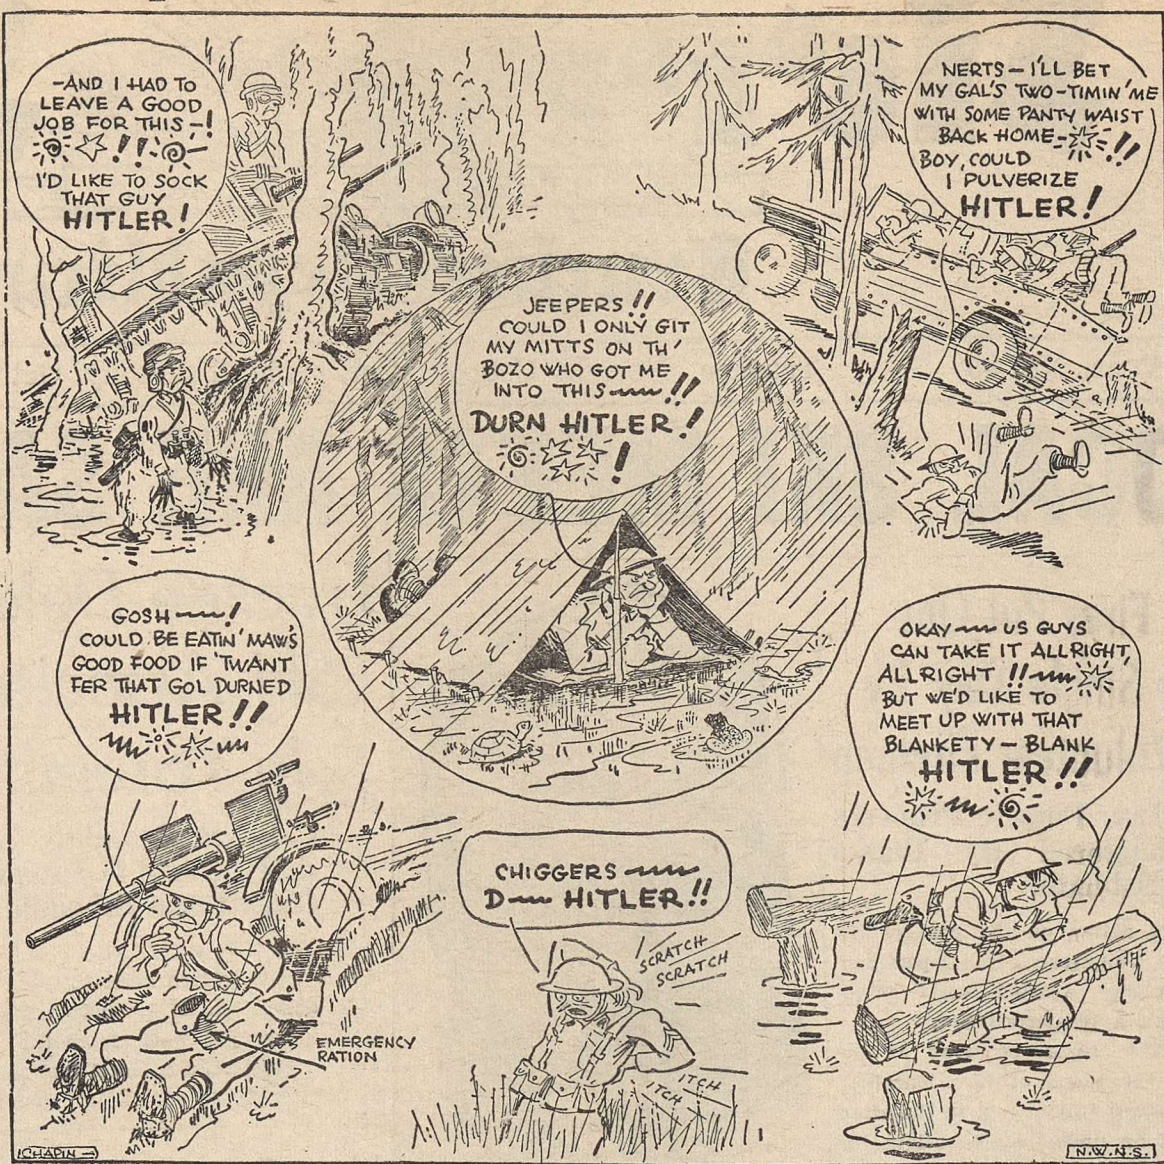

I got to talking about fighting the other day with Roy Feathers and Jerry Zunino about fighting and Roy recalled a rather amusing incident of early-day Truckee that I thought might bear repeating. It seems that when Roy was firing on the S. P. in '91, they were having a prize fight in Billy O'Neill's Saloon as an added attraction to patrons. After the main bout a white man and an Indian put on the gloves—after parking their guns with the bartender—and went to it. In the heat of the battle, the red skin bit his opponent upon which the latter dropped his hands, exclaiming, "I won't fight with a d-d dog," and headed for his gun, pulling off his gloves as he went. In less time than it takes to bat an eye, other firearms appeared, the lights were shot out and the entire crowd left by the back door, taking it right off its hinges. That, boys and gals, WAS Truckee.

I'm falling a little behind in my congratulatory notes to my friends so I'll just with Mr. and Mrs. Tom Pinckney happy birthday and happy retirement all as of October 22. To Dorothy Jean Wheat and Junior Henry and to Dolores Anne Pyle and Tom Grayce, my very best wishes upon their respective engagements. I know 'em all and I also know that in unions of people like this, not in the strong arm of the armed forces lies the future and the hope of the American way.

My personal library was enriched this week by the addition of several volumes containing selected works from the writings of Shakespeare, Poe, Stevenson, Tolstol and Hugo. Each of these men are of a different era; each of a different nationality, but each has a common factor in their social philosophy. A distaste for oppression and tyranny, a love of freedom and of the brotherhood of man. There is in this, then, a lesson to be learned. The things that are real, the things that live beyond the borders of time and find understanding in any tongue are messages of hope for the little fellow, messages of freedom for the down trodden. Long after Mien Kampf and authors like Virgilio Gayda are muck at the feet of swine, Hugo Tolstol, Shakespeare, Poe and Stevenson and others like them will live in the hearts of free men.

STREET SEENS: unusual crowd in town to see Parson of Panamint Saturday night which, incidentally, was a cracker-jack of a show... Bill Bechdel's swanky yellow and black job parked in front of Barney Corrigan's house... Rufe Gregory looking like a deer hunter Sunday morning... Bill Preston, Frances Polyanich and Sam Costa emerging from the drug store after an after-show coke Sat. evening.

HOW TO FIGHT FIRE

The hungry flames of forest fires are again breaking out in California during this dry season, ravaging timberlands, consuming precious ground cover, leaving hill-sides and mountain slopes draped in the mourning cloth of black and charred stumps.

Forest and park rangers warn that the danger period is at hand. Hunters, fishermen and campers can, with little effort, reduce that danger to a minimum by making doubly sure that when campfires are put out, they stay out, by breaking burnt matches with their fingers before throwing them away and by taking especial care with lighted cigarette stubs.

The U. S. Bureau of Standards has recently found that of all the combustibles preferred by smokers—pipe, cigar or cigarette—the latter is by far the worst menace when carelessly cast aside. A discarded cigarette will burn from 8½ to 12 minutes compared, for example, to a discarded cigar which smoulders out within 2.3 to 5.1 minutes.

But whether in smoking or dousing a campfire, red-dollars' loss. It's easier, safer and wiser to fight fire with prevention. Let's do it.

By LYTLE HULL

With the approach of winter humane Americans are beginning to wonder, and to worry, about food conditions soon to face the cold and hungry victims of Germany's ruthless invasions. There has been recent agitation in congress upon this subject.

The history of this unhappy condition is well known. The German authorities for the purpose of feeding their own people and their own armies, have taken essential food from the conquered territory to such an extent that, by some reports, the health of the peoples affected will be injured for several generations to come.

It does no good to revile the German government, and it is doubtful if any agreement could be reached whereby it would consent to return any appreciable quantity of the commandeered food. It has been said in this connection, that the German authorities are actually taking more than they need and are returning dribbles here and there in order to make their victims believe that they, the Germans, are befriending them while Britain and America are allowing them to starve for fear Britain may lose some slight tactical advantage over Germany.

If this report is true, then the matter takes on a significance for us other than solely humane. For the faith and friendship of Norway, Denmark, Belgium, Greece, France and Holland is essential to Britain and America both now and after the war is over.

And so, aside from the humane standpoint, the question stands: Is it more advantageous to Britain and America to allow the conquered peoples to hunger in order to prevent any additional food reaching Germany or is it better for us to take the chance of a few shiploads being stolen by Germany in order that the hungry nations may realize that we are trying to help them?

If the Germans are getting all they need, their only reason for taking what we might send would obviously be to starve the conquered peoples. The result would be twofold: we would instantly stop all shipments and the hungry nations would break out in open revolt against Germany regardless of the consequences.

There exists at present the belief that the privations of this coming winter may drive the desperate conquered peoples into bloody rebellion. But "bloody rebellion" would simply deprive them of what little food there is. Would they not instead turn against Britain and America for not even attempting a gesture of help for them who have fought and died as democracy's allies?

We may rest assured of one certainty: Germany is going to make the most of the emotional appeal in this situation and we and the British must use our brains if we are going to defeat their purpose. Our actions in the past—such as feeding Belgium during and after World War I, may account to large extent for that nation's alliance in World War II. There is peace to come—and there are other wars, America and Britain cannot combat the balance of the world forever. We must have allies who know they can depend upon us when they are down. NOW may be the time to make those allies.

Politically Speaking

by JOHN W. DUNLAP
(United Press Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 16 —(UP)—Will Dr. Walter F. Dexter, state superintendent of public instruction, resign his present $5,000 a year post to take one of three $10,000 positions on the new California Youth Correction Authority as rumored?

Dexter himself denies it. He declares he has no intention of abandoning his previously announced plans to run for reelection. But the rumor persists that his name is being advanced by a group of state legislators for one of the two posts which Gov. Culbert Olson will fill from a list of nominees submitted by an advisory panel.

Another rumor is that Olson has offered or will offer Dexter the third post, which he fills by direct appointment. State Senator John Harold Swan of Sacramento, is mentioned as a possible successor to Dexter in the educational post for which he once ran against former superintendent Vierling Kersey.

Swan termed the rumor "political poppycock" and gave Dexter his unqualified endorsement for superintendent of public instruction.

Olson's executive secretary, M. Stanley Mosk, denied Dexter had been offered the youth authority post but added he could make no statement concerning possible recommendations by the advisory panel which meets Oct. 27 in the office of Secretary of State Paul Peek.

However, other sources mentioned as possible appointees Francis Carr, Redding; William Hollander, Oakland; Cecil D. Holland, Beverly Hills; Dora Shaw Heffner, Walter White and Harold W. Kowsch, all of Los Angeles and John Short, San Francisco.

State Treasurer Charles Johnson is ready to take a crack at the gubernatorial race provided.... The catch is he doesn't want to be embroiled in an all-out primary campaign. If the Republicans are willing to support him and virtually hand him the nomination without too much of an intra-party battle, Johnson is willing to be a candidate. If he gets the nomination, he says he will campaign on a strict nonpartisan basis.

Johnson, first elected state treasurer in 1922 and reelected four times, has been mentioned as a candidate in other gubernatorial election years.

Don't close the books on possible candidates for lieutenant governor next year without including that legislative veteran of many campaigns, Assemblyman Charles Lyon of Los Angeles.

Lyon is one of the wise heads of the legislature and a leading member of the anti-Olson bloc. Naturally, he won't commit himself one way or the other this early in the game but he's been conferring with important Republican bigwigs to see how the wind blows.

There has been some talk that Lyon might seek the vacant senate seat of Robert Kenny, who has announced himself for the Democratic nomination for governor, but Lyon has told this writer quite frankly that he was not so much interested in the senatorial race because he felt he could be of more service in his present capacity as an assemblyman, or perhaps as lieutenant governor.

Lyon reasons that one more conservative vote in the senate would not make much difference, since the anti-Olson element is strongly entrenched. As a matter of fact, he will be one of the dominant lower house members again if he chooses to run for reelection, and is successful, because a large number of new faces is expected.

Lyon put in a good many years as a senator before reappointment cut the Los Angeles delegation to one man. He has risen to the post of minority and Republican floor leader and wielded much of the power that crippled the Olson program. He also helped elect Senator Thomas Kuchel of Anaheim as state chairman of the Republican party, so can almost bank on pretty strong support, no matter what he attempts along the political line.

With Lieutenant Governor Ellis E. Patterson a leading bet to retain the Democratic nomination, the Republicans will attempt to keep their field limited to avoid scattering strength. There are several hopefuls with balloons dangling in the political sky, hoping for support. One reason most legislators cast envious eyes on the job is that they now receive only $1200 per year and are on the political hot-spot the year around, whereas the lieutenant governor, paid $4000 yearly, has only to preside over the senate during the session, attend a few committee and other meetings, and can conduct private business or law practice on the side.

No one is discounting Patterson's strength, because he is an energetic vote getter and will be banking on the topheavy Democratic registration. Speculation is active on just where Governor Olson will end up on the issue. Secretary of State Paul Peek and Los Angeles Superior Judge Peirson M. Hall, both Olson appointees, have been mentioned as possibilities in that order, but there is some doubt either will give up good jobs for the uncertainty of a hot election contest.

The Holy Spirit of Our Helper.

Lesson for October 19: John 3: 5-8; Acts 1: 8; Romans 8: 26-28; Galatians 5: 22-26.

Golden Text: Romans 8:14.

When others had failed, with all the ingenuity at their command, to raise an object from the bottom of a deep estuary, an old man had the object lashed to a scow on the river and waited for the tide to rise. For behind the tide was the boundless power of the great ocean. Let us link ourselves to the power of God.

The Holy Spirit has many offices in kingdom. He promotes the conversion of men. If we would depend upon Him, instead of our own plans and expedients, the church would have genuine revivals.

The second chapter of Acts explains the mighty activity of the disciples, and their success in turning "the world upside down." Even as in the upper room, the promise of the Spirit is ours today. Read what the Spirit will do for the church—Romans 8: 26-28.

Consider the fruits of the Spirit. In their blessings—to those who bear them and to those who receive—their fruits may remind us of the trees John saw in the celestial city, with leaves for the healing of the nations.

The Almighty being has been revealed as God going before us, as God with us, and as God in us. We are living in the last great era in which God would dwell in us. We cannot think of any better relation we may sustain to God than that of His indwelling. Then let us open our hearts to the Indwelling Spirit, and live and serve in and by His presence.

ADVANCE YOURSELF BY BETTERING OTHERS

At the Union Stock Yards in Chicago, in the office of Armour & Company, is a man with two gnarled fingers. But the gnarled fingers are not the important thing. They became gnarled as the result of playing baseball as a young man. What is really important is that this man, the president of his company, applied for a raise only once in his life! Think of that. Zooming up to the presidency of a company and applying for a raise but once! His name is George A. Eastwood.

A man like that is worth knowing about.

He got a job in the Albany office of Armour & Company. He was young, ambitious and he worked hard. He decided to advance himself, but he knew that to do this he would have to perform some "skill." So he went to night school and studied stenography. When he could take dictation, he was given a better job, and soon was private secretary to the boss. He worked hard at this too. Week after week went by, but his boss made no suggestion about a raise.

Mr. Eastwood worked still harder. He hinted. But no offer of more money. In young George Eastwood's mind was the theory that to get more money for a job all you had to do was ask for it.

So one day he braced his boss and said he would like to go on the payroll for more money. The boss said something which changed the course of his life, and probably made him president of Armour & Company. The boss said:

"We are paying you all that the job is worth. The way to get a raise is to make the job worth more. Look around and see what extra duties you can take on. Find some way of shortening office routine; develop some idea that will make money for us, then we will be glad to increase your salary."

So he worked out a sales letter that increased business. He suggested a better way of handling correspondence between two branch offices. Then the manager called him in and made him chief clerk of the Eastern organization. Two years later he made him assistant manager. All the time Mr. Eastwood was working to help the company instead of himself.

Finally he was called to Chicago as head of the canned goods department. Then he became vice president, and in 1939 he became president. And he did not ask for a single one of these jobs! They were forced on him. He was showing the company how to better the organization; naturally they considered it to their advantage to advance him.

That principle holds good anywhere. Don't walk in and tell the boss you want a raise. Do something for the company—contribute some new idea—and the company, nine times out of ten, will want to pay. They will want you to stay with them. That single idea made George A. Eastman president of the biggest meat packing company in the world.

TAHOE SCHOOL NEWS

Students of Tahoe branch of the Placer Union High School entertained at a dance in the auditorium on Friday night with around 60 students teachers and parents of Tahoe and Truckee attending. Mrs. James Dyer and Jay Schumacher of the Tahoe faculty were chaperones, as were B. J. Corrigan and Tom Griffen of the Truckee schools.

Students received a most interesting letter from their former schoolmate, Donald Cowell, who is stationed with the army at Fort Bliss, El Paso, Texas. Donald is studying to be a veterinary surgeon and will graduate on Oct. 31. The Tahoe children had written him and asked for descriptions of the desert country, with which he compiled. He told the students that their letters were as good as a trip home and that he had read each to the last word. He pictured the surrounding desert territory, bordered by the Rio Grande on one side and a 5000 foot mountain on the other, with a vista of 100 miles of desert stretching away in the open. Also the army post, with its airport, buildings, tents and tanks which look like little bugs going around in the dust and smoke from the hillside. Then he told of the many kinds of desert plants and how they grow and of his work with the horses, of which there are many thousands at the post. It was a most informative and valuable addition to the social studies of the pupils and

Tahoe Center Building Is All Paid For, Says Board After Three Years

TAHOE CITY, Oct. 16—Officials of Tahoe Community Center announced this week that the building—which cost $7,000 to build in 1938—is now completely paid for. Trustees extended thanks to all the contributors who made this fine community project possible.

Tahoe City is most fortunate to have this fine example of civic cooperation which was built by the people's own contributions and work without any government aid.

The builder, the carpenters, masons and other workmen each gave freely a generous part of their services and residents, both seasonal and year around, supported the project consistently through the years.

Trustees plan to continue their work for civic betterment and will improve the Tahoe Commons by helping to build a sand beach, barbecue facilities, etc., as soon as it is possible to do so.

FIRE RAZES HOME AT TAHOE VISTA, BLAME PLACED ON THEIVES

TAHOE CITY, Oct. 16—The one and a half story stone summer home of George Bates of Reno, near Tahoe Vista, was completely destroyed by fire at two a.m. last Wednesday, Oct. 8. The house had been closed for the season by the owners the previous weekend and electric service discontinued.

The forest service fire trucks from Tahoe Park and Truckee kept the blaze from spreading but the house was beyond saving by the time the crews were notified.

Neighbors heard a car in the vicinity that night and it is believed that burglars may have started the fire to conceal their crime, as the remains of the fireplace was full of broken dishes, etc. The blaze was burning intensely all over the building when the rangers arrived, indicating that it had not started in only one area. The loss, estimated at $7,500, was only partly covered by insurance.

WOMEN in the NEWS

NEED MORE FOOD

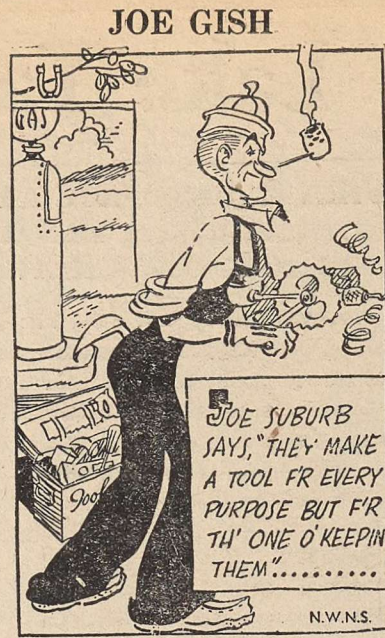

RECENT DEBATES in the house of commons have disclosed that women working in British industry are not getting enough of the proper kind of food. The recruiting of women into industry and agriculture is part of Prime Minister Churchill's effort, which has been only partly successful, to fill the gaps left when men are called to service in the army.

U. S. Wings for Pacific Defense

AMERICAN fighting planes today form the Allies' first line of air defense from Australia to the Netherlands East Indies and on to Singapore and Malaya. When war broke out, only Australia in this part of the world had a small aircraft industry of her own. This has since been expanded and now turns out hundreds of bombers and trainer-reconnaissance planes. There is also a new accessory industry in the East Indies, and the region is dotted with new assembly plants and repair shops. But even today, local industries can supply only a small part of the area's defense needs, and although not all of the U. S.-built planes so far delivered are of the latest types, it will depend on them and on the men who fly them—Australians, Dutchmen, British, Indians and Javanese—whether or not an Axis drive into the South Pacific and South Asiatic zones could be successful.

Shown in these pictures are: (top) Curtiss interceptor planes of the Royal Netherlands East Indies Air Force, manufactured in St. Louis, Mo., and similar to a type that has been standard in the U. S. Army; (left) Brewster "Buffalo" pursuit ships being serviced at a landing field near Singapore; and (right) Lockheed "Hudson" medium bombers of the Royal Australian Air Force during a patrol flight over the South Pacific. In recent months, a number of 20-ton Consolidated "Catalina" flying boats—similar to the one that helped locate the Bismarck—also have reached Australia and the Netherlands East Indies from the United States.

Lessons in HEALTH

by ARTIE MCGOVERN

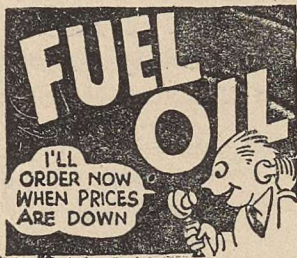

CHILDREN REQUIRE REGULAR SLEEP

Pacing the floor at midnight with a crying, wakeful child is not nearly so funny as cartoonists would have us believe. It not only robs the parents of needed sleep but in addition starts the baby on one of his most upsetting habits. A child must be trained to recognize and accept his bedtime without coaxing or pampering and, unless he is ill or just spoiled, there is no reason why he should not sleep soundly.

The first and most important step is regularity. When the baby is put to bed at the same hour every night and left alone in a darkened, quiet room he quickly learns to go to sleep without teasing for stories, for drinks of water or for any other attention. If he is permitted to stay up later one night, or if mother gives in to his whims even occasionally, she may be letting herself in for plenty of trouble! Don't let anyone tell you that a child is too young to know when he is getting his own way. Break your rules just once and see what happens! When you know he is warm and comfortable and well, let him cry. If your child cries because his health is not up to par, your physician should be consulted at once. However, if he is well physically and is crying merely because he is spoiled, he will soon learn that there is nothing to be gained by a tantrum and will go to sleep as he should.

Inconvenience to parents is a minor drawback in comparison to the real danger to a child's health in irregular sleeping habits, for every youngster needs plenty of rest if he is to develop a strong, sturdy body.

SYNOPSIS

Harley Longstreet of DeWitt and Longstreet, brokers, invites eight friends to celebrate his engagement to Cherry Browne, actress. On a Crosstown car Longstreet dies suddenly by poison scratched into his hand by a needle-pierced cork. The party consists of Longstreet's partner DeWitt and his wife, Fern and daughter, Jeanne; her fiancé, Christopher Lord; Cherry's vadeville friend, Pollux; Ahearn, friend of DeWitt's; Imperiale, middle-aged Latin, and Michael Collins, brawny Irishman. At the cabaret Inspector Thumm examines them. He is convinced the poisoned cork entered Longstreet's pocket after the party had boarded the trolley. Longstreet always read the evening paper on the trolley. Cherry Browne says, for the stock market news, especially about International Metals. That's why he had reached for his glasses. Suddenly hysterical, Cherry rushes forward to DeWitt: "You did it," she shrieks. "You hated him!" Drury Lane, retired Shakespearean actor, offers his aid to the police. He has solved other crimes for them before.

CHAPTER THREE

"Longstreet in matters of routine was extremely methodical. Particularly," added DeWitt acidly, "about the time he left the office. Frankly, he wasn't much interested in long hours or hard work; he left most of the plugging to me. Our main offices are down town, but we've always made a habit of returning to our branch at Times Square after Wall Street closing, and leave there for West Englewood. Longstreet generally quit the branch the same time every day, a little before six. He always made the same train on the Jersey side. When I didn't stay late at the office I went to West Englewood with him."

"Let's be frank about this thing, Mr. DeWitt. You heard Miss Browne accuse you of killing Longstreet. Of course that's nonsense. But she said you hated him. Did you?"

"I am innocent of my partner's murder, if that is what you mean by frankness."

Thumm stared into DeWitt's clear eyes, then shrugged and turned to the rest of the party. "Everybody here will please meet me at the Times Square office of DeWitt and Longstreet tomorrow at nine A. M. for further questioning. There will be no exceptions. And one thing more. Naturally I'm sorry, but you'll all have to submit to a personal search. Duffy get one of the matrons for the ladies here."

The procedure in the other room was now repeated, with the same result.

As Inspector Thumm crossed the branch office of DeWitt and Longstreet on Saturday morning, apparently business was being conducted in the normal way. Thumm's men, already on the scene, interfered with nothing.

Thumm looked them over without enthusiasm, then entered the Longstreet sanctum. There he found nervously perched on the edge of a chair a well-cushioned brunette, good-looking in a vaguely cheap way.

"I suppose you're Longstreet's secretary?" said Thumm.

"Yes, sir, Anna Platt. I worked for four and a half years as a sort of confidential secretary."

"Tell me—how did Longstreet and DeWitt get along?"

"They didn't get along. They were always squabbling. Mr. DeWitt always objected when he thought Mr. Longstreet was wrong, but always gave in finally."

"What was Longstreet's attitude toward DeWitt?"

Anna Platt twisted her fingers. "He knew Mr. DeWitt was a better business man and he didn't like it. So he just bore down and got things his own way, even if it cost the firm money."

Inspector Thumm's eyes wandered up and down the girl's figure. "You're smart, Miss Platt. We're getting right along. Did DeWitt hate Longstreet?"

She lowered her eyes. "Yes, I think he did. I think I know why, too. It's an open scandal that Mr. Longstreet—her voice hardened—"had an affair with Mrs. DeWitt. I'm sure Mr. DeWitt knew, although I never heard him refer to it."

"If Longstreet loved DeWitt's wife how is it he became engaged Miss Browne?"

"Mr. Longstreet didn't love anyone but himself. He had affairs all the time, and I suppose Mrs. DeWitt thought he was crazy about her. A couple of months ago Mr. Longstreet made advances to Jeanne DeWitt in this room and there was an awful argument, because Mr. Lord came in and saw what was happening and knocked him down. Then Mr. DeWitt came in quickly and they sent me away. I don't know what happened later but it seemed to be patched up."

"Do you think Longstreet had some sort of hold on DeWitt?"

"I'm not sure. Every once in a while Mr. Longstreet demanded large sums of money from Mr. DeWitt, 'personal loans,' he'd say with a nasty laugh, and he'd get them. In fact, only a week ago he asked Mr. DeWitt for a loan of twenty-five thousand dollars. Mr. DeWitt was awfully mad—I thought he'd have apoplexy..."

"I shouldn't wonder," murmured Thumm.

"They had quite a fuss, but he gave in, as usual."

"What did Longstreet do with all that dough? This office alone must have given him a big income."

Anna Platt's brown eyes flashed. "Mr. Longstreet could spend money faster than anyone you ever saw. He lived high, played the races and the market—and lost nearly all the time. He cashed his bonds and real estate securities long ago. I'll bet he hasn't left a penny."

Thumm drummed thoughtfully on the glass-topped desk. "Miss Platt, we're both grown people. Was there anything between you and Longstreet?"

She jumped up angrily. "What do you mean! Just because you're a cop, do I have to be insulted?"

"Sit, down sister," Thumm grinned as she sank back into the chair. "I suppose he promised to marry you, too? Threw you over for Mrs. DeWitt?"

"Well—" she was studying the tiled floor, "yes."

When Thumm spoke again it was on different matters. He learned that on Friday afternoon, before Longstreet had left the office for Cherry Browne's apartment, Collins had dashed in, purple with rage, and accused him of double-crossing. DeWitt had been out at the time. Collins had demanded that Longstreet make good the fifty thousand dollars Collins had lost in International Metals. Longstreet had pacified Collins by saying: "Don't worry, Mike. I'll see that DeWitt pulls you through." He had invited Collins to the engagement party, promising to speak to DeWitt there.

Inspector Thumm summoned DeWitt, who was chalky but self-possessed. Thumm said directly: "I'm going to repeat a question I asked you last night, and I insist on an answer

Why did you hate your partner?"

"I refuse to be bullied, Inspector Thumm."

"Very well, but you're making the biggest mistake of your life," Thumm said. "Now did Mrs. DeWitt and Longstreet get along—good friends were they?"

"Look here!" shouted DeWitt. "What the devil are you driving at?" Inspector Thumm smiled. "Take it easy. Were you and Longstreet equal partners?"

"Yes," said DeWitt in a smothered voice.

"How long were you in business together?"

"Twelve years."

"How did you two happen to team up?"

"We made our fortunes in South America before the last war. Mining venture. We returned and continued our affiliation in the brokerage business."

"You've been successful?"

"Quite."

"Then why, if you were both successful and had fortunes to begin with, did Longstreet borrow money from you continually?"

"This is ridiculous. I loaned him money occasionally, but these were trivial sums—"

"DeWitt," said Thumm, "you're lying. You've been paying Longstreet a great deal of money. You probably never expected to see your money again. I want to know why."

DeWitt sprang from the chair, his face purplish-white. "You're exceeding your authority! This thing had nothing to do with Longstreet's death! I—"

"No melodramatics. Wait outside."

DeWitt shook himself and left the room.

The interview with Mrs. DeWitt was short and sterile. She coldly denied any relationship other than friendship with Longstreet. She scoffed at the insinuation Longstreet had been attracted to Jeanne. Did she have any suspicion her husband was being blackmailed? "How silly!" Aside from eliciting the fact she and DeWitt had been married for six years and that Jeanne was his daughter by a former marriage, Thumm discovered nothing.

Thumm called Franklin Ahearn, but learned nothing except that he, an engineer, and DeWitt were good neighbors. Next he called Cherry Browne.

It was a completely altered actress who faced the inspector. She seemed to have recovered her natural gaiety. Her face was carefully made up; she was dressed in modish black. Her answers were decisive. She had met Longstreet at a ball five months before. He had "rushed" her for several months, and they decided to announce their engagement. She seemed childishly certain he had left millions. She admitted that her accusation of the night before had been prompted by hysteria.

"But Harley told me ever so often that DeWitt hated him," she added.

Christopher Lord stalked in Thumm stood squarely before him and they stared eye to eye. Yes, Lord said, he had knocked Longstreet down and didn't regret it one bit. He had tendered his resignation to DeWitt, his immediate superior, but DeWitt had placated him. He had allowed the matter to drop because he liked DeWitt and so, if Longstreet repeated his offensive advances, he would be on the scene to protect Jeanne.

Jeanne added nothing, except to defend her father with spirit.

Louis Imperiale and his sleek vandyke turned back to Thumm, bowing courteously. He had been DeWitt's good friend for four years now, having met him in Europe.

"Mr. DeWitt has been most kind," he said. "Each of the four times since then that I have come to your country on business for my firm, the Swiss Precision Instruments Company, I have been his guest for the duration of my stay."

Collins followed. His answers were snappish, ill-humored, grudging. Thumm gripped his arm. "Now you listen to me: You said last night that when you dashed up here you didn't have any words with Longstreet. I let it pass, but I'm not accepting that explanation this morning!"

Collins shook himself savagely free of Thumm's grip. "Smart cop, aren't you? What do you think I did—kiss him? He ruined me."

Thumm grinned. "Had good cause to put him away, didn't you?"

Collins broke into an ugly laugh. "Smarter and smarter! I suppose I had that cork full of needles all ready, waiting for the market to drop? Go back to the beat, Thumm."

Thumm merely said: "How is it DeWitt didn't know about Longstreet's tip to you?"

"That's what I'd like to know," said Collins. "What kind of bucketshop is this, anyway? But I'll tell you one thing. This DeWitt is going to make good that bum steer or I'll know the reason why!"
